Eagle Lake woman charged year after teen's death

MARTHA PERKINS
Editor

Little more than a year after the body of Jesse Dickson was found on the road between Eagle Lake and Haliburton Lake, police say they have identified the driver of the vehicle that is suspected of fatally hitting the Toronto teenager.

A 51-year-old Eagle Lake woman has been charged with obstructing police and failing to remain at the scene of the accident.

"She was the driver of the vehicle that struck Jesse and the two charges are the ones we have the grounds to proceed with at the present time," says Haliburton Highlands OPP Staff Sgt. Bob Walli.

Walli says that while it was frustrating for the investigation to take so long, "you want to do the job well and get all the possible evidence you can get. It was putting everything together in the right order."

"I'm glad we were able to [get to the point] where we can hear the case in court."

Sizing up the tour

A woman appears to be posing like one of Charles O'Neill's wire sculptures during the 16th annual Haliburton County Studio Tour. The tour goer was really sizing up one O'Neill's other sculptures for her home. Most artists on the tour believe the weather affected the numbers, but noticed a consistent rush of tour goers during the weekend. The tour continues on Thanksgiving weekend. More on page 12.

In the end it was perhaps a liking for things as they are.

For in spite of the polished eloquence of Liberal candidate Jason Ward - who many tipped to ride the wave of the anticipated Liberal election landslide across Ontario - or the booming bluster of Democrat Earl Manners, it was the far more mild-mannered Conservative Laurie Scott, the down-to-earth nurse from Kinmount, who grabbed the 47.4 per cent majority with 24,200 votes last Thursday to become the new Haliburton-Victoria-Brock MPP at Queen's Park.

In the aftermath of the win, however, Scott will be well aware that despite her happy victory, which owed no small part to retiring member Chris Hodgson's widespread popularity, the Tories lost 15 per cent of votes compared to the 1999 election - something in which both the Liberals and Democrats will find solace, with both parties making notable electoral gains at the polls.

But among the mock Ancient Greece pastels illuminating the Olympia Restaurant in Lindsay last Thursday night, where

She's singin' the blues

Haliburton's husky-voiced chanteuse, Sheri Hawkins, isn't serving up the traditional Thanksgiving fare this Saturday night when she performs at Club 1 in Bracebridge. She and her band, The Wiseguys, are billed as promising to deliver "an evening of dangerous rock 'n' blues. Although she's been working on a jazz CD Hawkins hasn't forgotten her roots – and neither will the audience at Bracebridge's hot spot. The October 11 concert starts at 10 p.m., with a $5 cover. Madeline Peacock of Gooderham has a good reason why she remembers the tornado of 1947 so well. She and her husband William were married on August 29 and they had their wedding reception at the community hall. Twenty-four hours later, there was nothing left of the hall; it was blown apart by the ferocious winds. "We'd always said 'What would have happened if it had come through the night before," she says. We had the wrong date of the tornado in a recent Pic of the Past.

Keith Branningan 1916 - 2003

After 10 years of a devastating long-term illness, Keith has finally said "good-bye", and it is time to remember those who helped in his care.

Thanks to all staff and volunteers at Hyland Crest Nursing Home. In the past two years, you have always brought out the best that Keith had to give. Thank you Barry Cray for your guidance and assistance. What can I say for the Gord Monk Funeral Home, that I haven't said on such previous occasions, about professionalism.

Thanks to all friends and neighbours, especially here at Horseshoe Lake, and the Gerry Espie and to Mrs. Pratt of home care groups. During the most difficult times, unfailing loving support was always there from Colleen Hewitt, Ruth Bain, Elva Heard, Fay and David Sawyer, the Dionnes, Mamie McLean and others. Simply, thank you.

Thanks to all who sent flowers, food, cards, telephone calls, kind thoughts, and for memorial donations in Keith's name, and thanks to the many who have richly blessed our lives with your love.

Ethel Curry gets her place in history

Bob Popple's book celebrates the life of Haliburton painter

MARTHA PERKINS

Editor

Bob Popple met Ethel Curry only once. It was at his brother's wedding to Curry's niece in Haliburton 37 years ago. But today he knows some of the most intimate details about her life and he's about to share them with the world.

This month heralds the publication of Northern Belle: The Life Story of Haliburton's Ethel Curry Including Her Connections to the Group of Seven, Popple's book on one of our most unheralded artists.

"No one's ever heard of Ethel Curry and yet she was every bit as good an artist in the 1930s [as painters whose works are recognized in Ontario's art world]," Popple says during an interview at his Piccadilly Bay cottage.

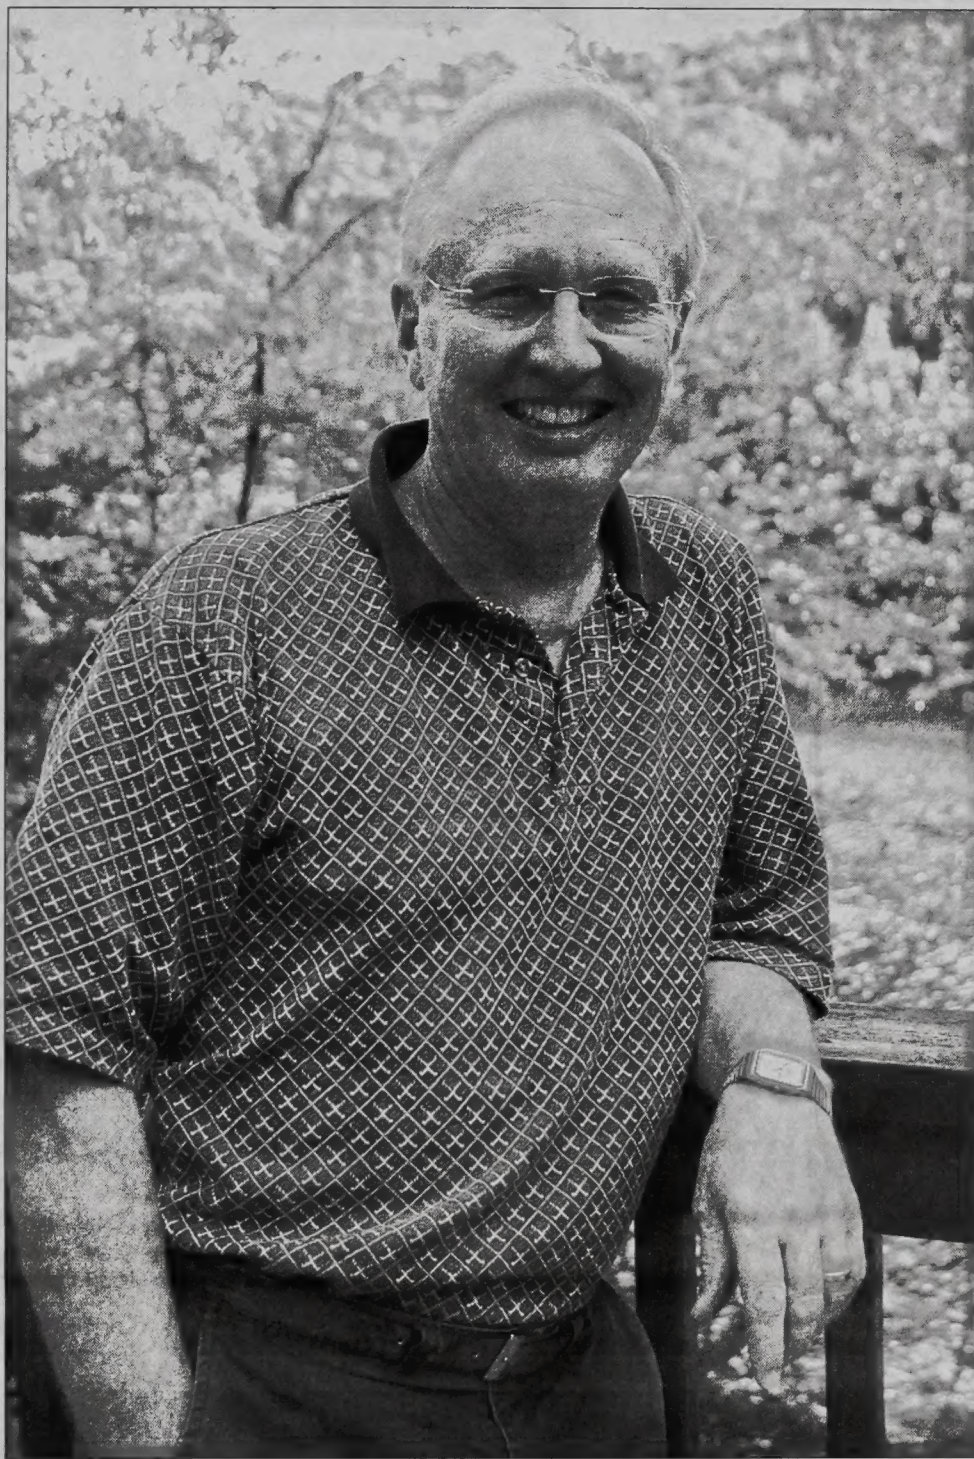

Her principal at the Ontario Art College was Group of Seven member J.E.H. MacDonald; she spent her Saturdays teaching art to young people at the Art Gallery of Ontario with the Group's Arthur Lismer. Her best friend was Doris McCarthy, who at 93 is one of Canada's most marketable and respected painters.

Curry – and that's how she was called by her friends – was born in Haliburton in 1902 to W.R. and Jesse Curry.

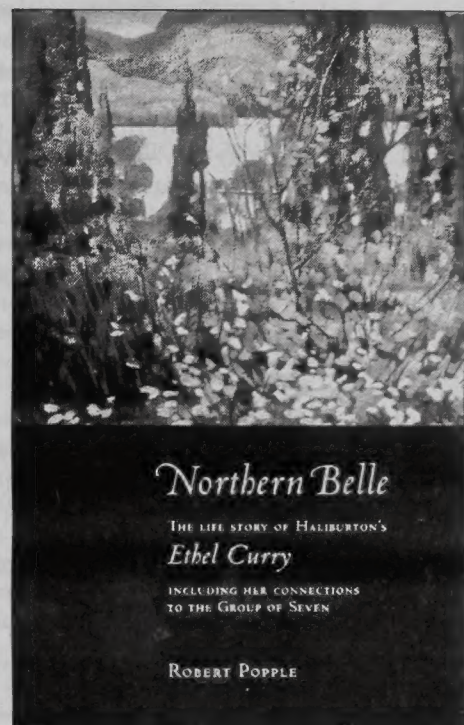

W.R. may be known locally as one of the village's most successful businessmen and politicians, but in 1906 his arrival in Haliburton was definitely unheralded. He had got a job as a cook with the Craig and Austin lumber camp and loaded his pregnant wife and two children, Ethel and sister Viola, onto a raft to travel part of the way by water to facilitate what was then a long journey on foot from the Maxwell Settlement near Iroquale. Oh, he also brought along his cow.

But W.R. was an amazing man, not only for his business acumen. (He opened a livery stable which later became Curry Motors; he became an undertaker, turning part of his house into a funeral home and was one of Dysart et al's early reeves.)

In an age where expectations for women did not extend beyond finding a suitable marriage partner, W.R. encouraged and fostered an independent spirit in his daughter.

Retired engineer and Redstone Lake cottager Bob Popple immersed himself in the life of Haliburton's best painter as he researched her fascinating life for his new book. Northern Belle will be launched in Haliburton on October 15.

In the early 1920s, most students' education ended with their Grade 8 entrance exam. There was no high school in Haliburton so to continue on, your family had to have enough money to pay for your room and board in Lindsay. Even then, few women continued with their education after high school. So imagine how extraordinary Ethel must have seemed when she left her home in Ontario's backwoods and enrolled in the Ontario College of Art in Toronto.

She stayed one year and then returned to Haliburton to teach for a couple of years to earn some money. It was when she resumed her studies at OCA that she met McCarthy. Their friendship, which was bound together irrevocably when Curry introduced McCarthy to her beloved woods in Haliburton. (The story of their painting trips here is endearingly told in McCarthy's first book of memoirs, A Fool in Paradise.)

In Popple's book it is McCarthy who fills in many of the details in Curry's notoriously private life. Over three years he had several interviews with her to get her input on why Curry, who showed so much early promise as a painter, essentially divorced herself from the commercial art world in the 1930s.

"With Doris, when she tells you this is what happened, that is what happened to the very last detail," says an admiring Popple. "I wrote this book with a lot of quotations from Doris and [Curry's former colleague] Bob Short. I don't want to distort or rework one word. When you're the reader, you can be in the exact same place I was."

When Curry and McCarthy were starting out, submitting their work to juried shows, Curry took the rejections personally. If the shows wouldn't take her work, she wouldn't work. "Doris had the opposite reaction which was to persevere," Popple says. "It took her a long time but she became established."

Curry instead turned her considerable energies to teaching. As the art teacher at Northern Vocational (now Northern Secondary in Toronto) she poured her love of painting and discovery into her students.

"She was without a doubt an outstanding art teacher," Popple says. "In the book I interview about a dozen of her students. I wouldn't say it was teacher worship but it's close. She made them dig down as deep as they could go and make themselves better."

But there was something else going on her life at the same time which has been buried by time (with Curry in her later years doing most of the covering up.)

The Ontario College of Art was just down the street from the Royal Conservatory of Music where a dashing young man with Howard Hughes good looks was a student. Wishart Campbell, who was later described as "the golden voice of radio", was handsome and charming and after a chance meeting on the sidewalk, Curry was absolutely smitten. In a charcoal drawing which she did of him in the 1930s, he could have easily passed as a Hollywood star.

He appeared, at least on the surface, to return the adulation.

"They became engaged in 1923 for the first time," Popple says of what would become a 27-year on again/off again marriage proposal.

It turns out that the man with the golden voice was looking for a wife who could lay the golden egg.

"Doris called him a social climber," Popple says, adding that her blood pressure always sets off whenever his name is mentioned.

As Curry remained loyally besotted as the bird in the hand, Campbell spent his time peeking around the bush to see if he could find one with finer plumage. He eventually found a real peacock in the Scottish heiress to a whiskey fortune, whom he married, officially putting an end to his engagement with Curry.

Curry's romance with "golden voice of radio" a 27-year heart-breaker

"The Curry family despise the guy because of the way he treated her but she could have walked away at any time, too," Popple says. "But he was the man of her dreams. Wishart skulks in and out of there for 25 years."

Wishart's name was not to pass her lips, or her ears, for decades. She never married and returned home to Haliburton in her later years, living at Extendicare until her death in 2000.

Curry's presence was always in the background of Popple's life. His brother Don, one of the present-day owners of Curry Motors, is married to W.R.'s granddaughter, Sheila Curry. Sheila's sister-in-law, Jody Curry, opened the Ethel Curry Gallery 10 years ago in order to preserve her legacy of encouraging artists in the Highlands.

Bob Popple spent his career as an engineer with Ontario Hydro's nuclear division but in his off hours he developed himself as an art collector. Because so many of Curry's paintings remained within the family, she did not establish a reputation in the Canadian art world, which he thought was a shame given her skills.

But the idea to look more into her life didn't come to him until he drove McCarthy north to Haliburton to take part in the unveiling of one of Ethel Curry paintings, on loan from Don and Sheila Popple, and one of her earlier paintings, which she donated, to the Haliburton Hospital. The two friends are now side by side again. (Curry and McCarthy had a joint show at the Rails End Gallery in the 1980s.)

"I drove Doris up here and back and had her captive for six hours," he smiles. "I realized there's a major untold story about Ethel and her father and to top it all off there's a love story!"

What also appealed to him was that it was a truly Canadian story with truly Canadian heroes. Given the background presence of the Group of Seven members, the story also resonated outside the boundaries of the Highlands.

Popple wrote the book in his spare time as a consultant. When it was done, he considered hiring an editor to go over it, but along with the expense, he was worried an editor would want to change his style.

"It took me two years to write it and do the research. Until you can finish it you can't get on with anything else. Editors, no matter how well it's written, they want you to write it again. I didn't want them to distort one word of what was said; I didn't want to re-write it."

There were difficulties in finding a publisher until Popple turned to Fox Meadow publishers in Huntsville and decided to self-publish.

The book is 250 pages – including a chapter on Ethel's role as a beloved aunt – and contains 18 colour paintings and 35 black and white ones. He chose the title Northern Belle because she's from the north, taught at Northern and was strikingly pretty.

There are two official book launches. One is at the Arts and Letters Club in Toronto, nerve centre for the Group of Seven in downtown Toronto, on Sunday, October 19 from 2 to 5 p.m. and the other is at BonnieView Inn on Thursday, October 15 at 7 p.m.. The launch is being hosted by the HHHS Foundation because part of the proceeds are being donated to the capital campaign. (Since Don Popple is the head of the fundraising committee one can sense a little bit of brotherly persuasion here.) Bob Popple will be at both events to sign the book for the many people who will want to look beneath the surface of such a fascinating life.

GIS would put county on the map

MARTHA PERKINS

Editor

Tony Bonnici's computer is the size of a briefcase but the information it contains could fill a room of filing cabinets.

At the touch of a cursor, he can tell you who owns a house on any given property in Peterborough County, when they bought it, how far it is from the property line, whether it's in a high-volume area of ambulance calls or in the midst of a forest, when the grass around the stop sign at the corner was cut, where the kids in the neighbourhood go to school and when the garbage gets picked up.

He can do in seconds what it would take a municipal employee to do it minutes – and many more minutes at that.

A group of local stakeholders, including the staff at various county departments, would like that information to be as easily accessible locally.

The county is being asked to invest roughly $100,000 in its own GIS system. It would provide detailed information about every centimetre of property in Haliburton County and be of benefit for a variety of uses, everything from coming up with a public health policy to filing a building permit.

Who gets to see that information is controlled. The information would be layered in such a way that's what public is available, perhaps even via the internet, and what's private can be accessed only by a limited number of people, such as municipal staff.

Bonnici was asked to the county council meeting to demonstrate what GIS offers. He helped introduce GIS to Peterborough County.

The amount of information was amazingly detailed. On the overhead screen he could show a general map of Peterborough County and then zoom into a specific neighbourhood. He could point out where there was a road sign and tell you what it said. He could say where the majority of emergency calls came from and he could provide information about where to send the tax bill for, for instance, Havelock's LCBO store.

To bring the system to Haliburton County it would cost $20,000 for a server with 10 users or $30,000 for unlimited users. Then there's the staff time to input the information.

June Phillips of the county's roads department said that the total cost could be up to $100,000 but also noted that at present government funding for 50 cent of that cost is available. Other potential users such as fire departments have other funding sources available to them. As well, much of the information now being supplied by government ministries is already coming electronically and it's easy to overlay much of the information.

She also noted the savings in staff time in researching information.

In the county, only Dysart et al has GIS. Its information could be easily inputted into a county system, she said.

County CAO Gary King said "There has been some resistance to the whole idea of GIS but all products [from the government] are now being delivered digitally and it won't be long before you're forced to go this route. It makes more sense to do it when there's funding available – and I'm just the messenger."

Warden Ross Rigney said he didn't believe it was resistance on county councillors' part but rather a sense of timing. "We have had a lot on our plates and we've said 'Let's do one thing at a time.' 911 is almost done so this is a 2004 project."

"No one's negative towards it," said Dysart et al Reeve Murray Fearrey. "We just have to get the facts straight."

Meanwhile, the Haliburton County Development Corporation, in conjunction with the county's 911 department, has sent a letter to other organizations and businesses which might benefit to a county GIS system to see if there's interest in joining the project.

All-candidates debates set for Dysart and Minden

Dysart et al ratepayers will have a chance to see all the candidates in the November 10 municipal election face the voters at an all-candidates meeting on Thursday, October 23.

Sponsored by the Haliburton County Echo and the Haliburton County Real Estate Board, the meeting will be moderated by Peter Forgrave.

Only the candidates for Wards 4 and 5, as well as the trustee position, have been acclaimed.

The meeting starts at 7:30 p.m. at the Haliburton Legion.

Voters in Minden Hills will get to see their candidates in action on Friday, October 15 at Archie Stouffer Elementary School.

The all-candidates debate there is being sponsored by the Coalition of Minden Hills Ratepayers' Associations.

Deputy-reeve Jim McMahon and Snowdon councillor Ron Buchanan have been acclaimed.

Delivery driver dies of heart attack

On Wednesday, Oct. 1 at 4:30 p.m. Officers from the Haliburton Highlands Detachment responded to a report of a driver collapsed in the front seat of a delivery truck in Haliburton.

A large Paxton delivery truck had been westbound on County Rd. #121 and stopped in front of the Shamrock Shell waiting to make a left turn. The truck remained stopped for quite some time with its left turn signal on but failed to make the turn. Eventually a citizen and EMS Manager Robert English, who was stopped in traffic approached the truck. The driver of the truck was found collapsed on the front seat.

CPR was performed on the driver who was transported to the Haliburton Hospital by ambulance.

The driver of the truck, Richard Evans of Peterborough, age 52 was pronounced dead at the hospital.

The Ministry of Labour has been called in to investigate as this was a workplace related incident.

This incident did not involve a motor vehicle accident.

A post-mortem examination was conducted at Ross Memorial Hospital in Lindsay. It determined, the driver of the truck died of a heart attack.

Teen struck while walking to cottage

On Saturday, September 14, 2002 17-year-old Jesse Dickson was out with friends. Although he had lived here when he was in elementary school, he and his mother Marlene had moved back to Toronto for his high school years. They regularly returned, however, to their Haliburton Lake cottage and Jesse loved to spend his winters snowboarding at Sir Sam's Ski Area.

Some time between 1 and 2 a.m. on September 15, Jesse's friends dropped him off at Eagle Lake Foodtown. Jesse has been known to walk from Eagle Lake to the cottage on Haliburton Lake, his friends say, but in an interview with The Echo last September his mother said that she and Jesse also had an agreement that he phone her from the phone booth at the Eagle Lake store and she'd come to pick him up, no matter what time of night.

"He could have died for something as trivial as not having a quarter on him," his mother said of Jesse's decision to walk back to the cottage instead of phoning her.

Jesse was picked up by a passing motorist at approximately 2:00 a.m. but was let off before his destination. He was last seen by a passing motorist at approximately 2:30 a.m. Sgt. Mike Reynolds said that judging by Jesse's injuries, Jesse was standing when he was struck by a vehicle just north of Parsons Road, six kilometres north of Eagle Lake. He might not have been by the side of the road.

He was not injured at some other location and dropped at the scene, said Walli. The woman charged with obstructing police and failing to remain at the scene of the accident next appears in Minden court on January 7.

Environment dominates Highlands East all-candidates meeting

ERIN TENNANT

Staff Reporter

Candidates for the Highlands East municipal election fielded questions from the public at the Lloyd Watson Centre in Wilberforce on Saturday, with topics of discussion ranging from property assessments to public participation at council meetings.

The nominees for ward councillors made short speeches to the 50-strong crowd, including words from Cindy Ablett, Gary Stoughton and Richard Forget for Ward 4, and from Nora Pasley and Donna Graham for Ward 3. (The Echo will be profiling each candidate in upcoming editions).

Reeve nominees David Burton, Keith Tallman (the existing reeve) and Chuck Viner (existing deputy reeve) then made their own election bids.

Again and again nominees pressed the need for addressing landfill site management, septage disposal and the problem of attracting light industry to the area.

Viner called upon his past experience on council to qualify him for reeve and also suggested making tax payments more flexible, saying it would help families that are "trying to make ends meet."

Burton spoke about his involvement with business and politics in the area as well as his volunteering on the fire department. He promised to encourage greater communication between ratepayers and council.

Tallman said his council had accomplished "a great deal" in the past years, saying the municipality had secured five landfill sites, paved roads with new graveling, kept municipal tax rates steady despite inflated provincial taxes, and were awaiting Ontario Municipal Board approval for septic disposal sites and provincial approval for an Official Plan.

Questions from the public began with a query about what the reeves could do to promote the arts in the area. Tallman and Viner said that Website promotions could work, while Burton suggested advertising in the Nora Pasley outlines her platform at Saturday's all-candidates meeting for Highlands East while moderator Hilda Clark and candidates Donna Graham, Rick Forget, Chuck Viner, Cindy Ablett listen.

Algonquin Gateway.

Viner and Burton were then asked what kind of industry they would encourage in the area. Both spoke about the need for light, environmentally-friendly industries. Viner pointed to Gravenhurst as a good example, adding that similar development could "provide employment to young people who simply can't find work here and instead leave the area."

Tallman defended the township's tax rates to one lakefront resident who said his tax bill had risen by 20 per cent. "We can't control what the province does with tax rates," said Tallman, saying that council had not reaped any more money than the last tax year.

One local wanted to know what kind of pressure councillors would exert on the province to update property assessments through the Municipal Property Assessment Corporation (MPAC).

"We can't get MPAC to come in and do the assessments," said Tallman. "It's a concern, but how do you deal with the provincial government?"

"You get a new one!" quipped one member of the audience.

But the issue continued, with another resident asking seriously, "If we don't have any impact on these things, how do we know whom to vote for?"

Stoughton reiterated that getting MPAC "to do their job" was a provincial problem.

Pasley, who has been heavily involved in opposing the Irondale asphalt plant, said that it was a matter of pressuring government ministries. "Maybe it'll take all of us to stand up and say, 'We're not going to stand for this any longer,'" said Pasley to audience applause.

Forget then addressed the need for better organizing volunteer resources in the community in response to a question about the issue. "Volunteers are a big part of this community," said Forget. "We have to get a clear communication between council and individuals so that the support is there for an event."

Questions about the progress of water testing at the Maple View housing complex, Viner expressed the council's frustration: "The people we've hired as consultants won't give us any numbers on how much it's going to cost [to address problems]."

Another resident raised concerns about attendance at council meetings, which he said are always held during the day when people have work commitments. Forget suggested holding the public portions of meetings later in the day to people can participate. Pasley said she was open to holding meetings on Saturdays. Viner was most passionate about the issue. "We have too many closed meetings - people should know what's going on," he said.

Stoughton retorted: "The staff meetings aren't closed to anybody. There's no reason why people can't come."

"If they're not closed," responded Viner, "why are they not advertised?"

The meaning of change

Neither the Liberals nor the Conservatives should take comfort in the notion that last Thursday Ontarians "voted for change." That gives the Liberals too much credit and the Tories too much of an excuse.

Even though there were five names on the ballot here in Haliburton/Victoria/Brock, many voters felt that they had little choice. They might have liked/disliked the local candidate but couldn't stomach their party's stance on the issues.

They might have liked/disliked the provincial leader's stance on the issues but couldn't stomach the local candidate's personality. There was too much of the sense that you had to pinch your nose as you marked your X on the ballot.

This election was the Tories' to lose and they did it in spectacular fashion, with no one to blame but themselves. Think back to the last election. During the Tories' first term in office there was nothing but criticism and hand-wringing in the media. Civil service jobs were slashed by a quarter, offices were closed, welfare payments were dramatically cut, teachers were marching on Queen's Park. Yet despite all the vitriol, people voted the Tories back with another majority government. Why? Because people thought the fiscal sacrifices were necessary. People wanted a government that could make the difficult decisions that came with balancing the books.

So far, so good. But towards the end of their last term the Tories started to go off track. They made a fundamental mistake; they lost touch with the people. The inner circle believed that Ontarians' conservatism is the Canadian cousin to Americans' Republicanism. America is great because of the power it gives to the individual; it's weak because that individualism has superseded a commitment to the common good. Americans want money in their pockets to buy their own medical services. Canadians want their governments to reduce debt so that the savings in interest can go towards universal healthcare and quality public education. That's why recent Tory campaign promises to cut taxes and give people back their money backfired. After stomaching the cuts that allowed the government to eliminate the deficit, people didn't want their taxes back; they wanted to know, for example, that hospitals and health units had the resources to avoid the chaos of another SARS scare.

When you look at the local vote, the Tories lost surprisingly little ground. Some voters did turn to the Liberals either for political or strategic reasons, but the Liberals lost more voters to the NDP, who ran a strong candidate. We'll be studying the entrails of that one for a long time.

People's main worry now is that we have an MPP sitting in opposition. Will the government taps to Haliburton County be turned off?

Look, however, at Chris Hodgson's legacy. He brought incredible stability to the Highlands. He got us our hospitals and, more recently, the funding they need to balance their books. He saw Stuart Baker Elementary School built as a stand-alone entity, and three gyms and a science wing added to the high school. He convinced his cabinet brethren to change the criteria to allow for a new Sir Sandford Fleming College campus. He helped create a trust fund to keep fish hatchery going. We got money not because we had an MPP in the party of power. We got money because of Chris Hodgson the individual.

We now have enough of a foundation to build on and it's not a bad thing to take a pause in our growth to make sure our debts are paid (for example, the outstanding fundraising for the hospitals' capital costs.) If the Liberal government increases spending on such things as education, it will be a blanket, across-the-board policy; Haliburton schools won't be frozen out. The same goes for healthcare and other government services.

Building better bookends

Old fashioned settees and modern sofas form bookends to the essence of the past hundred years. Colour the settee small 'c' conservative, the sofa progressive. During the past century we so embraced the idea of progress that that period now carries the label, making it unique from any previous century in the western world. We continue to rush along in pursuit of progress.

We have travelled far in the past hundred years from a time when expensive materials, often displaying fine handwork lovingly covered the settee, the most honoured seats for guests, in the parlours of the nation. Over time we have done such a good job of teaching our bodies to be comfortable only when ensconced in soft cushions that sitting on a settee or straight-backed chair is not something we willingly offer to visitors.

By our standards, a settee is exceedingly uncomfortable, being quite firm and straight-backed. Luxurious sofas grace our parlours (living rooms, great rooms, whatever the designation of choice for our entertaining space.) We now have the ultimate in comfort - either cushions of down or foam - into which we can sink our tired bones and converse with friends or sprawl and relax.

Has our ultimate comfort come with a price that we are only beginning to understand at a time when we are unwilling to give up present comfort for future well-being? Well, one statistic alone tells the tale. More elderly people break a hip bone when attempting to arise out of this sumptuous seat than in any other way, and broken hip bones are common place injuries as we get older.

Can it be that in our rush to be modern, to always be 'progressive', we ignore the fact that best functioning societies are premised upon two seeming opposites - progress and tradition?

Politicians like to take the two words into their political parties and make the words fit whatever they are proposing at the moment. The words 'progressive' and 'conservative' (non-capitalized), however, describe ways of thinking and shaping societies. As individuals, without being aware, we often espouse one to the exclusion of the other.

Take, for example, small 'c' conservative, in a non-political sense. The phrase has a long and noble history stretching all the way back to the times of the ancient Greeks and the philosopher, Plato. Tradition is its foundation. In its most elementary derivation it has come to mean building on the past to evolve new ideas for the present. In other words - "Don't throw the bath water out with the baby!"

The word 'progressive' has many adjectives to describe it, but most imply moving forward towards something better. Frequently it urges us to leave the strictures and structures that traditions have slowly evolved and to "move with the times." There is no question that each of us, from teen-aged years on, has groaned over the traditional whatever that have been imposed upon us by our families, by our workplaces, and even by our larger society. Too much hidebound tradition, without question, can stifle creativity. The stories of centuries past are filled with antiquated and even ridiculous rules that certainly helped to give impetus to our present-day love affair with progressive ideas that urge us to rush ahead because "if it's progress it has to be better." Logic would suggest otherwise.

The settee and the sofa, the first one slowly crumbling from disuse, and the second gradually crumbling the body that constantly uses it may teach us how to build better bookends for this new century.

For whom the bell tolls

Kids have a way of cutting right to the chase. This thought occurred to me a while ago after I heard frantic bell jingling. It sounded like a team of runaway horses racing down a wintry laneway. And somewhere along the line, that team must have run over a cat.

"Is it snowing in the living room by any chance?" I asked my wife.

"No," Carol answered, "but I did get a new collar for the cat. She's probably trying to slip it off."

That might have been plausible if, while making the attempt, the cat happened to get her tail caught in a ceiling fan or perhaps sucked into a passing tornado. Otherwise though, this irregular onslaught of jingling just didn't jive with the sounds produced in a simple feline collar removal attempt. I began to suspect that something untoward was afoot. Still, the tune was distinctly recognizable. Jingle bells maybe?

We entered the living room and found our daughter Carmen shaking the bewildered young cat for all she was worth.

Unfortunately, Carol ruined the moment by asking, "Carmen! What are you doing?"

"Just making sure the collar works mom!" She said without missing a single jingle. "It does too! Listen!"

"She's got my talent for music," I thought.

Carol remained utterly speechless - much like the cat who had resigned herself to thoughts of indignation and revenge.

I looked at Carol who was still fumbling for words.

"Daddy thanks you," I whispered softly across the room. "I swear I'll never forget this."

I then ran for the camera.

Unfortunately, Carol snapped out of it and rescued the bewildered cat. She tried to comfort it, but the wound-up feline just rocketed loose and transformed itself into a blur of gray, ricocheting off several walls before settling in an inaccessible spot beneath our bed - actually on the ceiling below it. Only the nervous tinkling of bells betrayed her position. At least I hope it was bells.

Perhaps I chose the wrong time to congratulate Carmen on what surely must be a bright future as a professional tam-bourine player. Carol shot me an agonized, albeit still soundless, look - the kind that suggests this sort of behavior has something to do with a clogged filter in my gene pool. I commenced to slink away.

"Explain to her why this is wrong," she ordered vaguely as she left the room.

Carmen looked at me with curiosity. So I sat her down and began with the basics -- namely that cats should be stirred and not shaken.

"But why daddy? Why?" She asked.

"Stirring is easier on their innards," I winked. "And that makes for a neater litter box. Remember that always, Pumpkin."

Carmen looked at me and then skipped away, her brain just about full. Recognizing this as one of those father-daughter memories that we'll recount awkwardly on her wedding day, I couldn't help but smile.

I mumbled to myself for a further fifteen minutes, as a precaution, just in case her mother was listening. Meanwhile, the cat jingled by, no worse for wear.

"How'd it go in there?" Carol asked, when I stepped out a few minutes later.

"Lose the bells or the cat dies a horrible polka-style death," I replied somberly.

"But then she'll lay waste to chipmunks, birds, and other innocent creatures," she replied. "There'll be senseless carnage."

"Yeah, but Carmen is three. She has to have some sort of outlet," I noted.

Later, that night in bed, Carol recounted the incident once again.

"Well, at least she wasn't trying to make sure the litter box works," I said consolingly. "We wouldn't have even heard that. Hopefully..."

"Maybe so, but what kind of crazy kid would shake a cat just to hear its collar ring?" She asked. "It's just not normal."

I did my best to avoid eye contact.

She got closer. "I said what kind of crazy kid would do that? Or perhaps, more importantly, who'd teach her to do that?"

All of a sudden, a deep and instant sleep overtook me.

"Steve, did you show Carmen how to play music with the cat collar?"

I opened one eye.

"Steve, did you?"

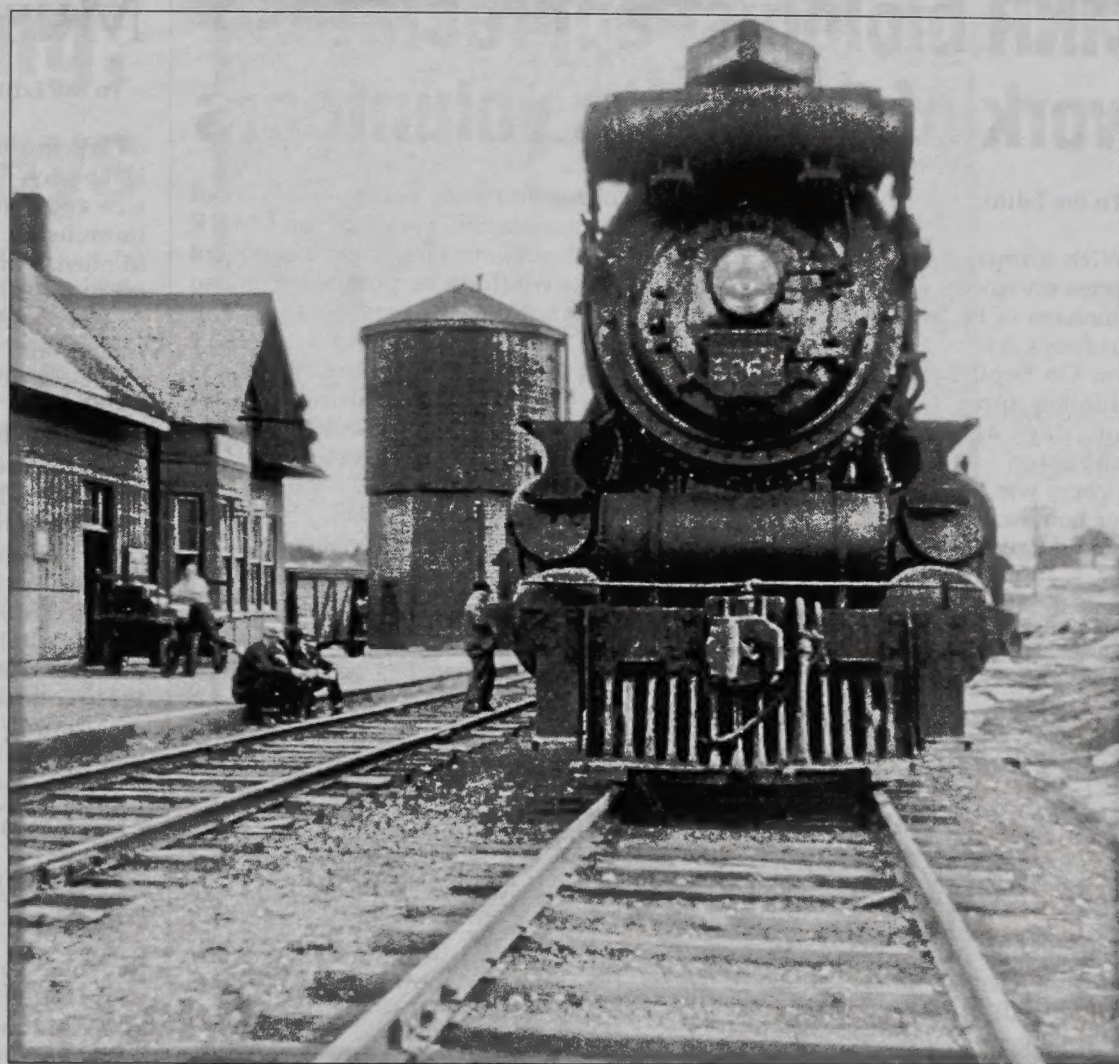

Now a lot of things happen in a typical day up here on Vinegar Hill. And I'm not saying that I'm guilty or innocent. I'm just saying, hey, like I told Carol, this time it just doesn't ring a bell.

Caregivers perform 'quiet miracle'

To the Editor:

A quiet miracle took place in Haliburton Hospital this fall that not many people know about. It involves Emily Pearl Shaw who was born on a farm near Gelert in 1911, attended the one-room school near Scott's Dam, and farmed at South Lake after she married Fred Barry in 1935. She's lived in Haliburton County all her life, the last six decades on the Barry farm on Highway 121, three miles south of Minden.

In early August Pearl was in such rough shape with congestive heart failure that she was admitted to the acute care unit - not for the first time. It was tough going. She was short of breath, in great pain from a fall, and not responding to her fluid medications. She couldn't keep much down, and after nibbling a piece of cake on her 92nd birthday, she stopped eating altogether and lapsed into sleep. We really thought we were losing her.

But after two weeks of crisis, she slowly started responding to care - waking up, talking, moving, eating. Eventually she lost 50 lbs. of fluid, started getting about with her walker again and even playing her guitar!

Lots of truly wonderful people had a hand in this quiet miracle. Dr. Heyes and Dr. Cole, who knew exactly what to do for her medically. The many nurses who took care of her 24 hours a day. Cooks and nutritionists and smiling cleaning staff. Her "roommates" - other women going through scary health crises of their own, every one of whom befriended Pearl.

Most touching of all, nurse Terri-lyn Fairey, a talented musician, more than once brought her own guitar in on her day off work to chord and sing along with Pearl, giving her something very special to look forward to.

We want to acknowledge everyone publicly. So - kudos to the medical team at Haliburton Hospital for bringing one tough Haliburton lady back to life! And profound thanks from all of us who love her.

MNR biologist appreciates work of Outdoors volunteers

To the Editor:

With admiration, I would like to express my sincere appreciation to all the volunteers of the Haliburton Highlands Outdoors Association. On Sept. 26 a volunteer appreciation day at the Haliburton Fish Hatchery was held in your honour, so that we could recognize the incredible, unselfish efforts that members contribute to fish and wildlife conservation in Haliburton County.

From spawning bed improvement work on Redpine and Koshlong Lakes this year, to Drag River clean up projects, youth education programs at the fish hatchery, wildlife seeding projects, emergency deer feeding, collection of winter snow-station data each year and committee membership with our Haliburton Lake Trout Project... the list goes on and on.

Successful partnership initiatives depend on the continued leadership and involvement by the volunteers. Without your assistance many of our MNR research programs and field assessment projects wouldn't be possible. We also begin another full season at the fish hatchery and many volunteers are needed for routine maintenance and cleaning of the fish culture facilities and daily feeding and monitoring of the fish stocks at the facility. The continued involvement of men, women and youth volunteers at the hatchery is vital to the success of this provincially recognized program.

HHOA Volunteers - Thank you for your countless hours of personal time to make our local fish and wildlife programs the hallmark of partnerships!

Most of all ... Thank you for sharing your insight, experience and friendship... proud traditions begin with strong fellowships.

Museum preserves history

To the Editor:

I recently had occasion to visit Haliburton County, accompanied by my wife and sister, and we enjoyed our visit immensely. Having been raised in Minden, with my parents being publishers of the Minden Echo, it was a pleasure to renew old memories, visit childhood places and friends, and to see the changes that have taken place since our last visit.

One of the highlights of our trip was a visit to the Haliburton Highlands Museum. The displays were well done, and interesting. Of particular interest to my sister and me were the items from the old printing office which had belonged to our parents. It was very nostalgic to have a chance to operate the old press, and remember past events. We reminisced particularly about the devastating fire which had destroyed most of the equipment and records of the old Minden Echo, the forerunner of your paper. It is because of our sense of loss over these material things that we particularly appreciate the efforts of the museum staff in preserving the history of the region.

Your museum, although small, is a treasure trove of history, and the staff is to be commended for preserving so much that can so quickly and easily be lost forever. The curator is most knowledgeable about the area and its inhabitants, genuinely interested in doing what a museum is supposed to be, and most willing to share his knowledge with any who ask.

You are, indeed, fortunate to have this museum to preserve your history for your descendants. It is so easily lost, and can seldom be regained. Our thanks to Dysart et al for their efforts.

Home Support grateful for art endowment funds

To the Editor:

I strongly believe that the efforts of Ray and Caryl Miller and The Ray and Caryl Miller Private Endowment Art Show and Sale should be recognized.

The gala fundraising event was held on August 15th, but the sale which benefits various charities continues through until December 24th.

On behalf of Haliburton County Home Support Services I would like to thank Ray and Caryl for choosing us to be one of eight smaller charities to benefit from the sale of a new collection of artwork by David Alexander Risk.

Caryl and Ray obviously put an incredible amount of time and effort into making this fundraising event a success. I was unable to attend the Gala, (I did attend on Saturday) but, all reports confirmed that Tenkortennar were incredible.

Home Support received $1,000 from the sale of two paintings. I can't tell you how thankful we are for this incredible fundraising boost.

The Wilderness Jewels were magnificent paintings of northern lights, dazzling star filled skies, moonlight, sun rises and sunsets. The Exquisite Little Masterpiece were unbelievable; I had to use a magnifying glass to see these postage stamp sized paintings.

If you didn't get a chance to attend this fundraising event, I would strongly suggest you pop into the Alexander Fine Art Gallery, Haliburton and have a look at these incredible paintings and see what other charities were involved in this collaboration.

Support base strong, victorious Scott says

Scott's Progressive Conservative supporters watched the polls come in one by one, it was all smiles. The more the phoned-results furthered Scott's lead, the more Scott beamed. As though reigning over her own figurative Olympia, she glided from one end of the big second floor room to the other, accepting congratulatory hugs, handshakes and kisses from supporters, while the equally ecstatic Hodgson never seemed more than arm's length from his rosy-cheeked successor. Just after 9 p.m., CTV declared Scott the winner.

A similar hubbub could not be found at the party venues for the other major candidates, however. At both the Liberals' rooms at the Lindsay curling club and the NDP's venue at the city's local Legion, the mood was subdued to say the least. Neither Ward nor Manners made appearances before about 9 p.m.

Scott told her supporters in her victory speech: "I want to reassure everybody that I am going to keep up the hard work. I'm looking forward to chatting to you more and working for you in the future."

When asked by the Echo what she thought had won this election for her, Scott said it was a matter of consolidating an already strong support base. "There wasn't any one definitive thing," she said. "We tried to get to every village in the riding [in the lead-up to the election]... And I want to give credit to Chris Hodgson and the work that he's done over the past eight years."

But while Scott's win defied the fatal fall in popularity for party leader Ernie Eves, Ward was unable to fully capitalize on the victory of his own leader, Dalton McGuinty. Ward won 17,100 votes – or 33.5 per cent – which represented just a 5 per cent gain on 1999's results.

The well-presented Liberal was brave and humble in defeat. He appeared at the Olympia to officially congratulate Scott before facing the music among his own party base.

The glazed eyes and lumpy throat made it palpable that Ward believed he could win this election. "It was my hope to build a truly just society to serve as a model in which every citizen has a chance to prosper," Ward told supporters amid sniffles. "Thank you for believing in me."

Ward told The Echo later: "This was a hard-fought battle from the beginning. I'm glad we closed the gap [between the Liberals and Conservatives] but I don't think we could have run a better campaign. In the end we just weren't successful."

The NDP's Manners said in his own concession speech that the results bode well for his party, with a final count of 7,900 votes in the riding – representing an 8 per cent improvement on the last election – and an overall second-place ranking among student votes. "There are a lot of people out there who took notice of this campaign," he said.

Manners also congratulated Scott in person, praising Scott for running a "clean campaign."

DARREN LUM/Echo

"We tried to get to every village in the riding (in the lead-up to the election)," says new MPP Laurie Scott, here accepting a phone call at her celebration in Lindsay on Thursday. "And I want to give credit to Chris Hodgson and the work that he's done over the past eight years."

But Haliburton County seemed to play little role in the final result. By 10 p.m., when Election Ontario had already ceased to phone in the tallies of each polling station, just four results had come through from the county – all of them from the Minden Community Centre. They showed Scott leading with 490 votes, Ward on 337 and Manners 143. Doug Smith from the Green Party had collected 37 votes, while the Family Coalition Party's Paul Gordon held 14 and the Freedom Party's Charles Olito had taken just one.

Studio tour shines

Hundreds of people braved the wet weather to see local artists studio on the weekend. Most artists said numbers seemed down, however, there were consistent crowds. There were a variety of media on display and for sale such as pottery, paintings, silks, woodcrafts and metal work. It continues this Thanksgiving weekend. See Fall Tour or check the studio tour pamphlet for details and the map.

Red Hawks feast on Falcons

DARREN LUM

Staff Reporter

HHSS 3

Finding the back of the net was not a problem for the Red Hawks against the Fenelon Falls Falcons last week.

The senior men's soccer team scored three goals against the Falcons for a convincing 3-1 win. Though the second half looked to be in the favour of the visitors, the Red Hawks put the game away when Captain Rob Ainsley knocked in the assurance marker during the final minutes of the game.

In the opening minutes the Red Hawk midfielders maintained pressure by pushing the ball forward, keeping the attack past centre. Long passes in the air proved threatening, but Red Hawks forwards could not capitalize.

A free kick taken by Matt Allore, from the left side, came close to the first strike, but the Falcon keeper reached enough during his jumping save to punch the shot away. Minutes after the ailing Cameron Bryant, who has a partially torn shoulder, ran the ball down the sidelines with Falcon defenders in chase. He crossed the ball to an open Matt Flowers who connected and struck low between the legs of the Falcon keeper for the first tally of the game.

The next possession taken by the Falcons resulted in a clear shot that sailed high and wide of the net. The next play returned to the Red Hawks who used it to get another shot on net. A forward running the length of the field passed across the field to a nearly open Cameron who just could not catch up to the pass.

Right before the first half an inadvertent hand-ball in the box gave the Falcons a free kick. With the wall set the Falcons struck, but could not penetrate as the shot was safely headed away by Brad Mickle.

Controversy started the second half. A shot by the Falcons appeared to sail past the net, but they complained the shot went through the hole in the net. The referee immediately waved off the goal despite a brief protest by the Falcons coach. The Falcons continued to press, using long passes to maintain ball possession.

Flowers would strike again. A free kick taken by captain Ainsley lofted into the box where Flowers again connected for a goal.

Only minutes after, even down by two goals, the Falcons responded with a goal of their own. A turnover in the midfield by the Red Hawks ended up on the foot of a Falcons player who chipped it ahead of a streaking Falcons forward who broke past a trio of Red Hawks defenders for a breakaway against goal keeper Matt Moore. The Falcons player shot high and to the left narrowing the deficit to one.

Before they could even celebrate the goal, the Red Hawks answered with a goal of their own by Ainsley, finishing the game and the chances for a comeback.

With forward Cameron running hard for a loose ball at the front of the net, confusion ensued. He ended up colliding with a defender and the Falcons keeper. The clearing attempt by the defender ended up at the top of the circle where Ainsley shot the ball and finished the game with a goal to add to his assist in the game.

Health for Life asks Haliburton to Get Movin' to gateway

Finding out about recreational activities in Haliburton County is as close as the click of a mouse.

Get Movin' is a new on-line gateway to recreational activities in Haliburton. Local residents can log onto www.familyserviceshaliburton.ca and look for the Get Movin' logo to access a variety of physical activity listings.

The web site also gives recreational groups the chance to promote their activities on-line for free. Coaches and activity organizers are urged to check out the Get Movin' site and register their events right on-line.

"Get Movin' is an innovative and interactive way to connect recreation providers with potential participants," says Anne-Marie Cyr, a Public Health Nurse with Health For Life. "The great thing too is that people can access physical activity opportunities any time of the day or night."

Get Movin' is a unique venture in Ontario that is filling a community need, according to Cyr.

Unlike other areas, Haliburton County doesn't have a formal parks and recreation department to co-ordinate and promote activities. That puts the onus on community groups and volunteers to come together and highlight physical activity opportunities, says Cyr.

"I think an initiative like Get Movin' is an example of how people can work together for a common cause," she adds.

The Get Movin' web site is more than just a listing of activities. A discussion site is included, as well as an on-line exchange for used sports equipment. The Coaches Corner section provide information links and resources that are useful when planning recreation, physical activity and sport programs. Tips on being an effective coach and running safe recreational activities are also listed. A Facilities Page listing all the County's recreation outlets should be up and running in a few months.

Get Movin' is sponsored by Family Services of Haliburton County, Health For Life, Trillium Lakelands District School Board, Haliburton Kawartha Pine Ridge District Health Unit, Haliburton Highlands Trails and Tours Network and U-Links (University Links for Community-Based Research and Education in Haliburton County, which is affiliated with Trent University).

People who need more information about Get Movin' or want to register an event can call the local Health Unit office at (705) 457-1391.

Luge reaches Haliburton Highlands

MICHELLE BOYLE

Special to the Echo

Imagine steering a small sled down a twisted ice-covered course, and racing around turns reaching over 80 km per hour while lying on your back. Compete against the clock, where every tenth of a second matters, and you are experiencing the adventure sport of luge.

There is a lot of skill and strength involved in maneuvering the sled which is capable of turning on a dime. This winter activity is an adventure sport which is now being introduced right here in our own community.

Students had the opportunity to hear about luge through a presentation at the Haliburton Highlands Secondary School on Friday, October 3. Clay Ives first spoke about his Olympic experience as a luge athlete. He grew up in Bancroft and first became interested in luge when his father got involved with the luge track in Bancroft when he was 15. Clay is now a three-time Olympian and won the bronze medal in 2002.

Ives spoke to the students about goal setting and what it takes for them to be successful. He encouraged them to put their best effort into anything they want to achieve and to remember that their "advantage is knowledge". He applied life lessons as he encouraged students to "involve yourself with good things and surround yourself with good people and good things will happen. Put your best effort forth and build off the people around you" was Clay's advice and hopes that they will each follow a dream through.

Ives fascinated the students with the dynamics of luge and probably peaked quite a bit of interest in the sport. The students were even more excited to hear that they too, can now try the sport right here in Haliburton.

The Redstone River Luge Club is a new luge course that is going to be operational this winter on Redstone Lake Road, about seven kilometres north of West Guilford. Lesley English and Doug Smith are the directors of the luge club and English said they both got involved because they believe this project has "potential for youth involvement in this community".

They suspect the sport will establish itself here if there is an athlete in the community that really wants to train up. "For a youth with a little bit of drive and passion, the sky is the limit", said English.

The Redstone River luge track is a natural track, but Smith feels it is every bit as exciting as any quality course. Described as "Olympic" by professionals, The Haliburton luge is the second best luge track in Ontario, and the sixth in Canada. Doug believes that in the future, it has "the potential for world cup races."

The popularity of luge is just beginning to spread in North America, but Lesley exclaims that it "has enormous potential in the winter season." She's proud to promote the Redstone River Luge Club in Haliburton, which "is low cost and accessible to families". A day pass, including equipment and instruction is

Kai Shin hosts Shiai

The 2nd annual Shiai—a friendly karate competition—was hosted by the Kai-Shin "North Branch" karate club at The Haliburton Royal Canadian Legion on Sunday, Oct. 5.

Every age and skill level were represented at the competition with more than 60 competitors ranging in age from six-years-old to 47. There were nine karate clubs represented that came from London, Trenton, Bancroft, Mississauga and Bolton. Three branches of the Kai Shin were in attendance.

Prevention key to avoiding health crises: Hukowich

SHERYL LOUCKS
Staff Reporter

The following are brief reports from the Haliburton Kawartha Pine Ridge District Health Unit's meeting of Sept. 18 in Haliburton.

Dr. Alex Hukowich, medical officer of health, assured the board there have been no problems in the district with meat that originated from Aylmer Meat Packers Inc. A recall was issued for beef from the plant on Aug. 25. The plant has been investigated for illegally processing deadstock.

Hukowich says only one store in the district was selling meat that originated in the Aylmer plant. However, the doctor says it is another example of how an issue outside of the Health Unit's mandate took up a lot of staff time as they responded to public concern.

"Clearly this (Aylmer incident) undermines confidence in the public health system," he says.

He added it is strange to him that people think that the only way the public is safe from tainted meat is to have an inspector sitting in every abattoir as meat is processed. He said people don't think their water isn't safe if there isn't a provincial inspector sitting at the water plant. He also pointed out the best way to lower deaths in vehicle accidents wasn't to increase policing, it was to make wearing a seatbelt mandatory.

Smoking ban

Reducing tobacco consumption equals a reduction in the incidents of cancer, Hukowich says. He says in order to influence people to stop smoking the Health Unit needs to work at creating a climate that encourages people to quit smoking or makes it very difficult for them to smoke - in other words municipally-enforced smoking bans. The only community in HKPR to have put in place a full-fledged smoking ban is Cobourg, while one other municipality is working on a ban.

"It has been proven time and time again that smoking bans work in reducing the number of people who smoke and then subsequently the number of people who get cancer. It rankles me that it's still so hard to get some municipalities to understand their role," he said at the board meeting where municipal councillors were sitting at the table, amongst them Reeve Keith Tallman of Highlands East where there is not a smoking ban.

Hukowich says that in comparison to other prevalent cancers such as breast cancer, lung cancer (associated with smoking) is far more lethal with a low survival rate. He says more than 80 per cent of lung cancer fatalities are smokers.

Influenza

High fever and coughing are symptoms of SARS and influenza and there is no way of initially knowing which of the two a patient may have. Dr. Hukowich suggests Health Units use the recent SARS scare as a way to convince people to get flu shots. He said anyone who has symptoms similar to both diseases could face testing and restrictions for SARS until it is determined the patient has influenza. The best way to limit this problem is through immunization.

He wants to encourage the 60 per cent of the public that doesn't get immunized to get a flu shot and give everyone peace of mind. He says those with people with preventable influenza could cause anxiety and additional work for health care providers, fellow employees and families.

He is working with hospitals to spread the message that immunization not only protects one person but also reduces the strain on the system so doctors are available to treat the critically ill. Some hospitals, he says, believe this tactic is too negative but he says it is not his intention to infer hospitals cannot do their job or cope with the influenza season.

He has also suggested to the Ministry of Education and the Ministry of Health that they allow students to put the time it takes to get a flu shot towards their community hours requirement.

"Students of that age group don't think about getting ill so it's very difficult to impress upon them the importance of getting a flu shot," says Hukowich.

School boards have not been receptive to the idea.

Vaccine Lottery

The HKPR's chicken pox vaccine lottery created some controversy, Hukowich says. He heard complaints from people that they were "gambling with children's health." He said it turns out that everyone who subscribed to the lottery will have their children vaccinated for free and even then it will only use $16,000 of the $50,000 available for the vaccinations. None of the children whose names were entered will be denied the vaccine. He says they still need to consider how to promote the vaccination this fall.

Power outage

The Sept. 5 blackout that affected much of the eastern seaboard taught the health unit an important lesson about its own needs in a power outage. Hukowich says it became apparent that had the blackout continued there'd be a desperate need for gas for their inspectors' vehicles and generators. The board passed a motion for staff to look into agreements with municipalities to access their fuel supplies in cases of emergency. Otherwise Hukowich says there were no major problems caused by the blackout although they did lose about $10,000 worth of vaccines due to interruptions in refrigeration. Sue Bickle, administrator, says four of the HKPR health units were open to the public with a low level of air conditioning so people could go there if they needed to cool off.

The invitation is out to Hike Haliburton

Two years ago it was just an idea but in just two weeks, the Hike Haliburton Festival will be a reality. What's a hiking festival, you ask? Well, it's when people come and stay overnight, spend time on the trails, enjoy the outdoors and learn something new.

The festival idea came from consultants hired by the Chamber of Commerce with a portion of the provincial government's $250,000 tourism development grant in 1999. The Trails and Tours Network embraced the idea and when it applied to the Ontario Living Legacy grant program the festival was included and received were funds to implement it.

Offering an array of adventures, live entertainment, a dance, a silent auction and free BBQ, the first ever hiking festival in the province seems poised for success.

Trails and Tours Network Executive Director Lindsay Elder says hikes and walks have been developed to appeal to all age ranges and abilities and feature a broad range of themes including geology, technology, ecosystems, the arts, nutrition ... and poop.

'Get the Scoop on Poop' is, indeed, one of the scheduled hikes. Algonquin Park Naturalist Kevin Clute answers all the questions you are alleged ever to have had about animal poop but were afraid to ask. The experience – said to be very entertaining, includes an indoor scat review, an outdoor search and the highlight: learning the poop song, aptly entitled "The Scat Rap."

The GPS Scavenger Hunt lets folks use technology to find a series of clues, visit each checkpoint and solve the puzzle to be eligible to win a prize.

"You can bring your own GPS until or borrow one of ours, but we only have six to loan out so it's first come, first served," says Elder.

The geology hike, entitled 'Gems Beneath your Boots' features a visit to private property for a unique geological highlight: fluorrichterite. No, it's not for your teeth; it's a very rare mineral that exists in only a few places in the entire world!

Hikes are located all around the county and hike leaders include a Fleming College professor, an MNR educator, Algonquin Park staff and local hikers, all of whom have donated their time and knowledge to contribute to the festival.

Festival participants can choose from 12 different hikes with titles like Roam the Ridge, Foliage Frolic!, Llama Walk, Barking up the Right Tree, Walking on the Right Side of Your Brain and Milling 'round the Mill, the latter of which takes place on the private trail system of Stouffer Mill B+B at Halls Lake.

"Visitors say our trails are nice and soft compared to Algonquin Park trails and everyone loves to see the beaver ponds," says Don Pflug, owner of Stouffer Mill.

The renowned Walk in the Clouds is included, too, so for those who never quite managed to book a canopy tour, now's your chance. This experience is the only one that comes with a fee; the rest are free.

The festival kicks off Friday October 17 with several hikes throughout the day and in the evening a free barbecue will be held at the Haliburton Highlands Outdoors Association facility on County Road 1, offering a night hike on the association's brand new trail, tours of the fish hatchery and live entertainment with performer David Archibald.

The Blister Ball and Silent Auction is Saturday night at Carnarvon Bowl and features live music and dancing with Toronto band Coyote Wild and catering by Franka's Delectables.

Tickets for the dance are available at Henwood's Variety in Haliburton, the Chamber of Commerce office in Minden and the Trails and Tours office in Carnarvon. For details call 489-4049 or visit www.trailsandtours.on.ca.

Book gives new life to R.D.'s legacy

MARTHA PERKINS

Editor

IN 1985, MIKE POLAK was a 20-year-old Czech immigrant wondering what to do with the rest of his life. He knew he wanted to study biology at university, but where? And why? How could he turn his love of nature into a worthwhile and satisfying profession?

He turned to one of the Canadians he deeply respected and trusted, Ron Lawrence. Even though he had only met Lawrence through his books on wildlife, Polak intuitively knew that they were kindred spirits.

"As I study your work," Polak said in a letter to Lawrence in 1985, "I become possessed by a sense of fullness, eagerness and understanding. My own ideas blossom. I become aware of my love for nature; trees, birds, mammals... Your work inspires me to the fullest..."

"I need help and suggestions. How can I become more knowledgeable about our wilderness [during a year off between high school and university]? Where should I try to go? What were your aspirations when you were my age? I am eager to learn and to become your student."

Every week the mail brought letters of praise and respect to the esteemed author of several books on wildlife but Lawrence must have also intuitively known there was something special about this one. (Actually, Lawrence would have probably dismissed the whole notion of intuition...)

He wrote back to Polak, thus beginning a correspondence and a friendship that lasts until this day. Today, the 20-

MARTHA PERKINS/Echo

Although Alzheimer's disease has stolen Ron Lawrence's memory, his contributions to our understanding of nature live on in the memories of others. Natural Heritage Books hopes the re-publishing of his book The North Runner will reach out to a new generation of readers. He lives with his wife Sharon at their home in Gooderham.

year-old student searching for direction in his life has his PhD and is a professor at the University of Cincinnati. Dr. Polak is also writing the introduction to the re-issuing of one of Lawrence's books, A Natural History of Canada.

Meanwhile, Natural Heritage Press is continuing with its goal of introducing a new generation of Michal Polaks to Lawrence's work. It has just re-issued The North Runner, Lawrence's moving tale of his search for healing and deeper knowledge of nature in the company of a half-dog/half-wolf with an equally battered spirit.

The year was 1959. Born at sea to a British father and Spanish mother, Lawrence as a teenager had participated in the Spanish Civil War before being shot while fighting in World War II. After the war he decided to leave the bloodshed and memories behind by immigrating to Canada and trying his luck as a journalist. But he wasn't having much luck. Sure he had found work as a writer but he hadn't found the inner peace that had been alluding him after so many years of war.

"Lawrence is a person scarred deeply by war," says Max Finklestein in the book's new forward. "He has been cut so deeply that he never wants to be hurt again. For R.D., relationships are now ephemeral diversions, here today, and gone tomorrow. His emotions are walled off and he finds peace and solace in the wilderness - his salve for a mind torn asunder by war.

"Into R.D.'s solitary life comes a being much like himself. Scarred emotionally, physically beaten, the dog that R.D. names Yukon is reputed to be half-wolf. Together, these two beings form a relationship so close, a friendship so deep and abiding, it changes both of their lives. The love of Yukon re-awakens in the author the love of life."

A short time before the arrival of Yukon in his life, Lawrence had had enough of the "abrasive" atmosphere of Toronto and, driving north, found a remote cabin in Lake of the Woods. He plans to travel around in winter by dogsled and needs a lead dog. An acquaintance sells him Yukon, an angry, distrustful and highly unfriendly dog who literally bites the hand that feeds him on the first night.

Soon, man and dog are inseparable, forming a partnership that is to give each of them the confidence to fully embrace the idea of discovering new worlds together. They leave Ontario behind and travel across the country to a remote part of Northern British Columbia, their eyes open to every nuance in the wilderness around them, their ears attuned to the unspoken messages in the wind and water. They see only one other person in eight months.

It was an arduous journey full of dangers and challenge and they emerged stronger than ever. The experience would shape Lawrence's life as a wildlife author; he would write about nature only after immersing himself in it. Ironically, it was during this trip that he met his second wife, Joan, and after her death from a brain haemorrhage several years later he would take a journey by boat up the coast of British Columbia as a way of assuaging his grief. That adventure is documented in Voyage of the Stella.

The North Runner, written in 1979, not only chronicled Lawrence's experiences and observations but it also struck a chord among some of his younger readers, those who shared his eagerness to explore and, like him, did not yet have the commitments to keep them closer to home.

"The book made so many people write to Ron because [the journey] was such an incredible thing to do," says his wife Sharon today, sitting in the living room of their home near Gooderham. "Even decades later it's awesome that a man and a dog went in there and spent all that time alone."

One of the people inspired by the book, which would win the award for the best non-fiction paperback in 1980 from the Canadian Paperback Publishers Association, was 12-year-old Michael Randolph. Like Lawrence he was born to a Spanish mother and British father but the affinity went further than that. Michael also wanted to become a naturalist.

Michael writes a letter of praise and admiration to Lawrence but what 12-year-old would have expected to receive an invitation to Lawrence's home in response? Michael could hardly believe it when on April 1, 1980 he got a letter from Lawrence at his home in Toronto. (When his sister told him the news, he thought it was an April Fools joke.) What's more, Lawrence asked Michael if the youngster would like to come for a visit.

Another person to be influenced by such generosity of spirit was Robin Radcliffe, a vet who's about to go to work in Africa. "Thank you for the encouragement that you have given both myself and my twin brother through your books and personal letters," he wrote recently from his home in Minnesota. "You have very much influenced my life and my dedication to the conservation of earth's living creatures."

Closer to home there's Brent Wootton. Brent recently received his PhD in fish biology but when he first listened to a speech Lawrence gave at a university near his home he was a 15-year-old high school drop out with an interest in wildlife.

"I was a pretty troubled teen," Wootton said in a 2001 interview with The Echo. "Ron took me under his wing. That summer he took me up to Haliburton Forest and said 'Peter [Schleifenbaum], give this guy a job."

Peter Schleifenbaum did but by summer's end, Wootton still refused to go back to high school. Lawrence did his best to change his mind. As Wootton recalls, Lawrence said "You want to have an impact? You have to do it from the

Ron Lawrence has Zen-like reverence for nature

DR. MICHAL POLAK

Special to The Echo

As a young adult when I visited Ron for the first time I was utterly captivated by his vast knowledge and unique style of spirituality, imbued with Zen-like elements, toward the natural environment. He teaches deep respect for the natural world, which can only be cultivated by experiencing the environment around us by way of all our senses.

I was immensely influenced by his emphasis on the need to purge one's mind of distracting thoughts, stress, and emotions, especially fear, before entering the wilderness and attempting to observe and understand it in its own right.

Ron is a generalist and he taught me that the value of this approach was that it allowed the development, over years of careful study, a big picture understanding of natural systems, which he firmly believes is critical for successful conservation.

He is strongly committed to conservation efforts that seek to preserve entire ecosystems, as opposed to those that focus only on 'flagship' species. He is fully committed to the view, reflected of course in the fact that he is a prolific author, that educating people (voters) is the key means of assuring the long-term protection of the natural world.

Ron believes in challenging students to think critically and to reevaluate their own meaning as human beings as well as their missions in society. He is terribly successful at this because he commands an enormous amount of respect, instills awe in everyone who has had the fortune of meeting him, and because he is completely committed to his own mission. This commitment to teaching, and emphasis on a diversified approach to biology, coupled with a firmly challenging, yet kind, approach to teaching, are some of the major elements of Ron's 'doctrine' that I have incorporated into my own career as a university-level educator and researcher.

Dr. Michal Polak is a biology professor at the University of Cincinnati. He is writing the forward to the re-issue of Lawrence's book, A Natural History of Canada.

Others keep author's memory alive

inside. Do your PhD in biology and then you can make a difference much easier."

"I credit all my accomplishments to Ron," says Wootton. "He believed in me and had a profound influence on my life."

"What Ron has done for me, he's done for a lot of other people."

One of the saddest things for Wootton, and everyone else who's had a friendship with him over the years, is that today Lawrence doesn't recognize him. A couple of years ago, Lawrence was diagnosed with Alzheimer's and his memory, once so phenomenally detailed, has gradually slunk away into the black night of the disease. Still, there are signs of his old impishness especially when the conversation turns to politics. It's as if his cynicism, finely tuned over the years and combined with more than a hint of intellectual superiority, has embedded itself deep into his psyche, needing little to trigger it.

Now 82, Ron Lawrence may not be able to remember anyone, or any of his past, but there are many people who remain a living testament to the significant role he played in their lives. They will remember him and keep his memory alive.

With the re-issuing of The North Runner another generation may be inspired to do the same thing.

Week at cottage is a dream come true for cancer patients

MARTHA PERKINS

Editor

For most of this year, Myles McLellan's world has been a steady succession of hospital visits. Fighting the brain cancer which threatens to kill him has been an all-consuming task for him and his family; it has defined their very existence. Instead of being able to be a typical 10-year-old boy, he's been a patient.

But for one week last month, the McLellans were given the opportunity to forget all about that and just be like any other family enjoying life in the Highlands.

Thanks to Drag Lake cottagers Bruce and Ginny Miller, Myles and his family spent an idyllic week at the Millers' cottage.

"It gave us a chance to see our son as a child again, laughing, telling silly jokes, cuddling on the comfy couch," says his mother, Susan. "We managed to capture some very special moments that would have never been possible without this wonderful organization."

That organization is Cottage Dreams, the brainchild of Clement Lake resident Seana O'Neill.

Several years ago she lost her mother to breast cancer and remembers how difficult the months of treatment had been on her entire family. Sitting on the deck of her home last Labour Day, she thought about the restorative spirit of the lake and was saddened by the realization that many cancer patients could not afford such a respite.

But O'Neill is a doer. In her years in the film industry, it was her job to help make sure things in that crazy world got done on time and on budget. Over the winter she came up with the plan for Cottage Dreams. She'd

After giving six cancer survivors the opportunity to find respite at a Highlands cottage in September Seana O'Neill's goal is to make 25 matches next year.

Little more than a year after she came up with the idea, six families have participated in the highly-successful inaugural season, including Myles and his parents.

Another participant was a 39-year-old mother who had just finished treatment for breast cancer. She told O'Neill that the time at the cottage helped her slow down – and realize she'd been too busy coping with the disease to go through the mourning period that comes with such bad news.

In the program's first year, O'Neill wanted to take things slowly so she could be sure everything would be done well. Although she has 50 cottages all across Ontario, and in parts of Quebec, lined up, she started with only six; next summer she plans to work her way up to 25.

"The response was incredible," she says. Not only did families willingly give up the use of their cottage for one week in September, but Cottage Life magazine named Cottage Dreams as the first recipient of its new credit card donation program. She received a start-up grant from the Haliburton County Development Organization and Franka's Delectables volunteered to provide one free frozen meal for each family. There have been many in-kind donations from everyone ranging from lawyers to help with setting up the charitable foundation (tax receipts can now be issued) to musician Jeff Healey who performed a benefit concert in the spring to Dr. Jaan Roos of Minden who provided the medical assessments for free.

If you'd like to help a cancer patient fulfill their Cottage Dreams, please contact O'Neill at 448-9190 or visit www.cottagedreams.org

Cancer survivor Jeff Healey did his part in helping to raise money for Cottage Dreams. He and his band put on a concert in Toronto in April, at left.

A journey to understanding

After paddling 1,800 km young couple finally touch ground

DARREN LUM

Staff Reporter

With laughter, and the congratulatory hugs, Stephanie Miller and Paul Robinson were welcomed by their parents and loved ones after paddling 1,800 km across five major waterways to retrace the route of Canada's early voyageurs.

The young couple ended their two-and-a-half month odyssey at Bruce and Ginny Miller's Drag Lake cottage last month.

Last July the two were planting trees in Manitoba when they came upon a lone wolf. Instantly they thought of Ontario and the wildlife they were missing.

Their minds raced, thinking of "dream trips". That evening Stephanie and Paul pulled out their Ontario road maps — the only ones they had at that time — and charted a course from Thunder Bay to the dock of Stephanie's parents cottage overlooking Outlet Bay. Thunder Bay was chosen as the starting off point since they both knew the area from their experience studying outdoor education and guiding there.

"We wanted to link up different waterways: Great Lakes (Lake Superior and the North Channel), Georgian Bay, Severn River, and then the Kawartha Lakes," Stephanie said.

This isn't their first attempt at a long epic journey. A couple of years ago they paddled across the Antarctica.

When people hear about their accomplishments they often ask them how they can do these epic trips. They do not see these trips as large undertakings, but more as an aspect of their lives.

"It's just a lifestyle for us...we commit the time and make it a priority," she said.

"You pause to watch the sunsets every night. Everyday you wake up not knowing what the day is going to bring. You were open to whatever was ahead of you."

Late in the trip they contacted CBC radio and before they knew it the couple were filing stories for the northern exposure segment that ran July, August and September. Armed with a MiniDisc recorder mailed to them from CBC they canoed up and down the Lake Superior coastline interviewing ordinary people with extraordinary stories. Ironically, like the people they interviewed they felt the same way about their own trip, discounting the challenges they faced and the discovery they made about people.

Travelling by canoe on large lakes is restrictive. Large swells and strong currents can make the going challenging and even treacherous at times.

"Lake Superior, specifically, is a wild and rugged lake. Strong winds, strong waves and cold water all those things put together you're really calculating your risks of when to go and when to stay off the lake," Stephanie said.

"There were times we came close," Paul said. "We were always willing to get off the lake."

"It was always travel safely over travel quickly."

Along with a guitar, camera equipment, the Mortimer the moose mascot — borrowed from friends Bill and Cathy Murray —, half-a-dozen books, and basic camping gear, the couple had their husky mix Binojii share the experience of lifetime on a canoe for two months. Besides water hazards, the couple faced another challenge, which was dealt with by Binojii who travelled with them the entire distance except for the last two weeks. On the shores of Lake Superior a black bear decided to visit their campsite. Binojii leapt into action and kept the bear at bay, staying between the bear and the couple. Paul snapped off a few quick photos before they packed up and left.

Unlike most trips, they knew they would be encountering many people, boats and everything else that is on a busy route. The couple allowed three months for travel. Their only deadline was to arrive before the end of September's cooler temperatures and rain.

With no strict dependence on speed the couple found the experience liberating and safe. It was even made better because they weren't in a hurry.

They were aware of the 1,800 km distance, but with the amount of time they had they never felt like they were forced to set any strict daily distance.

"Each day we didn't focus on 'oh my gosh we only did 20 km or we did only 2 km'. It just kind of built up along the way. We knew when we got there we would get there," she said. "It's neat to know the number and test yourself physically and feels great to pull up to this dock. Our arms paddled 1,800 km together."

She says "This trip we were open to the fact that there were people all the way and that enriched the trip so much. We met amazing storytellers who taught us so much about Lake Superior and Georgian Bay," Stephanie said.

People along the way provided them accommodation, food and renewal in the belief of people.

When they left the Minden docks and were walking to Canning Lake a local man in a van drove by and saw them carrying their gear. He offered them a drive. They couldn't believe it at first. They accepted. The man wanted to remain anonymous and even refused a photo with the appreciative couple.

He simply told them, "It's my good deed of the day."

"You never know what you'll get in an urban area," Stephanie said. "It renewed my faith in people."

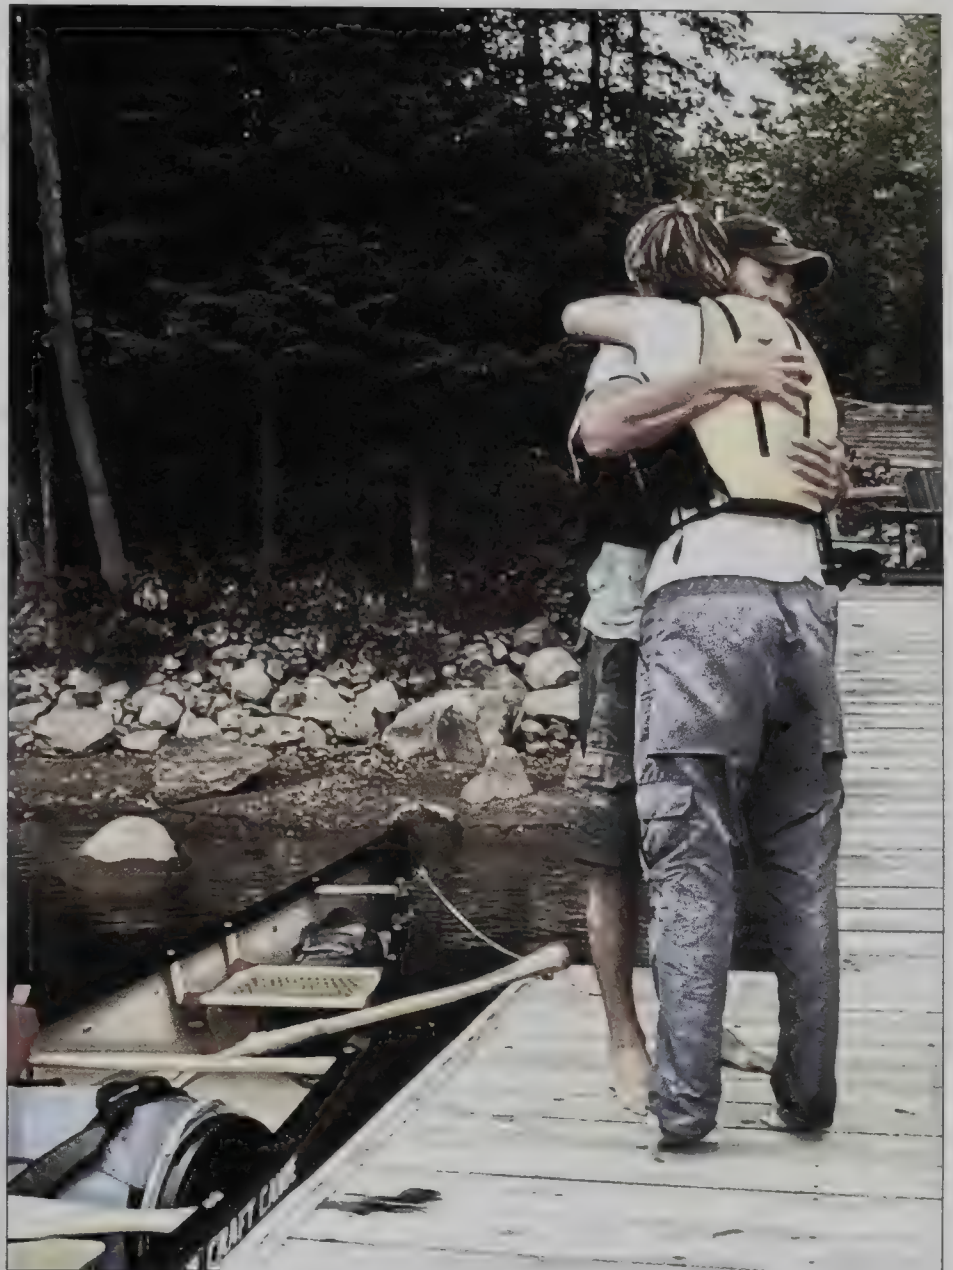

It was a unique experience that could not have been duplicated any other way. Even when they were struggling, battling the oppressive humidity and the envying the ease with which the motorized boats were moving, they were content in the fact that this experience would not have been possible without the canoe.

"The canoe is what made the trip," Stephanie said.

You never know what you'll get in an urban area...It renewed my faith in people.

Stephanie and Paul embrace at her parents' dock. Their relationship grew from the long trip and both discovered people are still good at heart.

Campus Celebrates "Thanks for Giving"

HALIBURTON – The "Creative By Nature Capital Campaign" for a new Haliburton Campus of Fleming College will be reflecting this Thanksgiving on the many generous donors in this community. To date, the Campaign has reached over 94% of their goal of $2.5 million toward this much-needed community project.

Murray Fearrey, Chair of the Campaign team adds, "While we have achieved so much, we are eagerly awaiting the day when we reach 100%. I know that through the generosity of this community, that day will come shortly."

The new Haliburton campus is a partnership of the community, college and the province, through a significant long-term commitment. The Province of Ontario has allocated $5.5 million through the SuperBuild program and the Municipality of Dysart et al has generously donated the serviced lakeside land.

This year, the "Creative By Nature" team held a very successful golf tournament in June, and will be holding Valentine celebration for "Cottage Lovers" held in Toronto on February 12th. This event will bring together our County's cottagers for a night of fun benefiting the Capital Campaign.

"This year's achievements would not have been possible without the support of our many volunteers and donors," added Barb Bolin, Principal of the Haliburton Campus. "I would encourage everyone to watch for some exciting developments in the near future."

The College's Campaign Committee is also excited about a recently received work of art donated to the Campaign by artist Robert Bateman. This original painting entitled "Loons and Grasses" is hoped to garner much interest from the artistic community and assist the fundraising efforts of the Campaign.

Dust off your curling shoes

Curlers prepare for good times on ice, as season sweeps in Thinking curling! Drop by the Wilberforce Club on Thursday, October 23, between 7 and 9:30 p.m. to register for the leagues of your choice. This Open House is a social time with refreshments and is a great opportunity to get revved up for the season ahead. The executive has been organized for the 2003-2004 season which will get underway the week of November 3rd. So dust off your curling shoes and clean your brooms for some good times on the ice.

It was delightful to welcome to the village two bus loads of people on a Greater Harvie Historic Society Tour on Saturday afternoon October 4, 2003. Over eighty people from the Buckhorn, Bobcaygeon, Kinmount areas were on a day tour learning about the history of the communities they visited, about the minerals and rocks and enjoying the colourful foliage of our halls and valleys often mirrored in our lakes. While in Wilberforce they were greeted by Jodi Rupnow with information about the village and treats from Agnew's General Store and Linkert's Bakery. Thanks to Jodi, Cathy Agnew and Mary Barker for organizing and providing these "welcome bags." The visitors were welcomed to St. Margaret's Anglican Church beautifully decorated for Sunday's Harvest Thanksgiving Service. Thanks to Bruce Gibbs and Elsie Lewis for hosting that visit. They were pleased to be received at the Red Cross Outpost Historic House by Wilberforce Heritage Guild Members Judy Johnson, Flo Taylor, Ken Sanderson, Nadeen Sanderson and Hilda Clark. There they learned of its significance through a brief talk and tour. After fresh coffee and cherry cake from Janet Barker's bakery many promised to return for a longer visit to the Outpost and the village. Also taken in were Agnew's Store, the Railroad/Train Mural, the Cenotaph, Sculpture Garden and Eileens Ice Cream shop.

Wilberforce provided a warm welcome to these folks who had visited the Petroglyphs, the Bancroft area and many villages along the way. It was a well prepared tour with each person receiving a well bound booklet about each of the places that were visiting. The information was concise and accurate, the pictures clear and well selected. Many thanks to the organizers of this tour for including our Village. It was great.

The Wilberforce United Church celebrates 114 years of providing a place of worship and praise to God in this community with their Anniversary Service on Sunday October 19, 2004. The Gentlemen of Song will be the special choir at the service which begins at 11:30 a.m. A pot luck luncheon and a time of fellowship will complete the celebrations.

An all Candidates meeting of candidates for election to the Highlands East Council was fairly well attended on Saturday, October 4, 2003. It began at 1 p.m. at The Lloyd Watson Centre. The moderator Hilda Clark introduced the two councillors who have been acclaimed in their wards: Bill Howe from Ward 1 (Bicroft) and Suzanne Partridge, Ward 2, (Cardiff). Each of the other candidates were given up to five minutes to present themselves their ideas. Speaking first (by draw) were Cindy Ablett, Gary Stoughton, and Rick Forget running for the one position of Councillor for Ward 4 (Monmouth). Next were Donna Graham and Nora Paisley contesting the one position for Councillor for Ward 3 (Glamorgan). Finally the three contestants for Reeve for Highlands East, Chuck Viner, Dave Burton and Keith Tallman spoke of their plans and vision for the municipality.

Questions from the floor were directed at the candidates. They were clearly presented and touched on issues such as police protection, assessment, mill rate, appreciation for volunteers, septic disposal, water, promotion of the arts; appropriate industry and time of council meetings.

Over coffee candidates mingled with the ratepayers and spoke to individuals. The election is on Monday, November 10. Voting will receive their ballots and instruction in the mail in the next few weeks. Everyone should check to make sure his or her name is on the Voter's List. Do talk to the candidates and please vote.

If you have been promising yourself a trip to Stratford for some tremendous theatre, there is still time. Having just seen four plays last week, I recommend that you take a mini-vacation and go. It's not far. "The King and I" is a magnificent extravaganza. "Gigi", the other musical is delightful. And don't miss "Present Laughter" a Noel Coward play directed by Brian Bedford and in which he leads a cast of the very best Canadian actors. There are tickets for those and other plays including Love's Labour Lost, Taming of the Shrew, Pericles and the Hunchback of Notre Dame right through October-and ever the first week in November. Recess Treats!

There is nothing like recess. A chance to get out of those chairs, run around the playground and grab a snack.

Well forget the chocolate bars and chips and let's do healthy treats for that recess or after-school snack.

SOFT GRANOLA BARS

A great energy bar

3 cups quick cooking rolled oats

1/2 cup packed brown sugar

1/4 cup wheat germ

1/2 cup butter softened

1/4 cup corn syrup

1/4 cup liquid honey

1/2 cup chocolate chips

1/2 cup flaked coconut

In a bowl, combine rolled oats, sugar and wheat germ.

Using pastry blender, or two knives, cut in butter until crumbly. Stir in corn syrup and honey until combined. Stir in chocolate chips and coconut.

Press into greased 9-inch square cake pan. Bake in 350° oven for 20-25 minutes or until golden. Let cool on rack and then cut into bars.

These freeze well.

From Canadian Living Best Series Fruit, 1997

POWER BARS

These will get them going.

2 cups whole-wheat flour

1/2 cup packed brown sugar

1/4 cup skim milk powder

1/4 cup wheat germ

1 tsp baking powder

1 1/2 cups raisins or chopped dried apricots

1/2 cup unsalted sunflower seeds

2 eggs

1/2 cup vegetable oil

Cooking with...franka
andrianoFRANKA1/2 cup molasses
1/3 cup peanut butter (if your school doesn't allow peanut butter snacks these are great for after school)

In bowl, combine flour, sugar, skim milk powder, wheat germ and baking powder. Stir in raisins and sunflower seeds.

Whisk together eggs, oil, molasses and peanut butter, stir into dry ingredients until blended.

Spread into greased 9-inch square cake pan.

Bake in 350° oven for 35 minutes or until browned and firm to the touch.

Let cool on rack, cut into bars. Makes 24.

FLAKE AND FRUIT SQUARES

Another good one

3 cups cornflakes

1/2 cup sunflower seeds

1/2 cup whole unblanched almonds

1/4 cup sesame seeds

1/4 cup chopped dried dates

1/4 cup chopped dried apricots

One-quarter cup butter

3 cups miniature marshmallows

1 tsp vanilla

In bowl, combine first 6 ingredients. In large saucepan, melt butter over low heat; add marshmallows and cook, stirring constantly, until melted. Stir in vanilla. Stir into cornflake mixture until well blended.

Spoon into greased foil-lined 9-inch square cake pan, packing firmly. Refrigerate for about one hour or until set. Remove from pan; cut into squares. Makes 16.

Both recipes from Canadian Living Best Muffins & More 1994

Evaluation confirms U-Links' benefit

Consultants conclude community-based education program is a success

KATE HALL

U-Links Coordinator

Consultants evaluating the efficacy of U-Links and the community-based education program concluded that, "It is evident that the program is far more than just 'an honest broker' connecting students and professors with community organizations.

It is an engine that facilitates the creation of new knowledge and infrastructure that changes the way community organizations do business; improves their programs; and, will ultimately create improved social, economic and environmental conditions in the community."

In the spring of 2000, Foremost Consulting Services was contracted by the Trent Centre for Community-Based Education to undertake an independent evaluation of the Community-Based Education (CBE) Program, as delivered through U-Links Centre for Community-Based Research in Haliburton County and The Trent Centre for Community-Based Education in Peterborough.

Funding for this evaluation was generously donated through the Estate of Margery J. Warren.

U-Links is grateful to the Warren Estate for its support over the past two years, and for the wisdom trustees showed in recommending a program evaluation. It has been an affirmation for those who worked so hard to conceive and establish this program, and ultimately a gift of stronger, healthier communities in the surrounding region.

Established as a project of the Haliburton County Community Co-operative, U-Links began delivering the Community-Based Education Program in Haliburton County in 1999. Since then, there have been 28 research projects completed by 24 students on a variety of topics from local history to the arts, business and environmental issues.

The CBE Program is a new approach to experiential learning. Proposals for research projects are invited from the community and are expected to support social, cultural, environmental and economic development in the County. These projects are promoted to faculty with similar research interests as well as Trent University students. Students are then matched with projects and "host organizations" in the community to assist them with research, planning and development projects. While earning course credit students are able to gain practical experience in their field of study and help to solve current challenges in the community.

The consultants were to answer a fundamental question posed by the Warren Estate: "Does the Community-Based Education Program benefit, or have the potential to benefit, community organizations?"

To answer the question consultants dived into the program's aims and operations, assessed community needs, while exploring how local agencies and community groups viewed the potential benefits. Finally, during a two-year period, the consultants surveyed CBE program users to determine if these groups did indeed benefit from participation.

Survey respondents in both Haliburton and Peterborough overwhelmingly (92%) said that the CBE program was needed. Furthermore, respondents rated the vast majority of projects (83%) as successful. The evaluation confirmed our belief in program benefits and wherever possible the consultant's suggestions were integrated into operations during and after their report. Staff have already noticed the results.

In this academic year, 2002-03, there are 14 community inspired research projects, involving 17 students from Trent University and Haliburton's Sir Sandford Fleming College, underway.

Some examples are: A Survey of Health Care Needs in the HHHS Service Area, The Environmental Impact of Snowmobile Emissions, The History of Settlement on Canning Lake, Mining Heritage Tourism and three projects pertaining to rural recycling issues.

All Trent student papers are available on loan to community members through The Haliburton County Collection, an archive of student research and other unpublished material on Haliburton County located at the U-Links Centre. To view a listing of the material available through this archive go to www.haliburton.cooperative.on.ca, click on U-Links and peruse the collections.

Thanks to all of those who have been involved with U-Links over the past four years for their support and for work on community-inspired projects that promote creative and sustainable approaches to community & economic development in the County. U-Links gratefully acknowledges the financial support received from Trent University, the Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce, The Warren Estate, and the Township of Minden Hills.

A special thank you is extended to the Haliburton County Development Corporation for their generous support enabling U-Links to match students with five different projects brought forth by the private sector to enhance economic development in the County.

U-Links is currently accepting submissions of new research ideas from the community for the upcoming academic year. To find out more about the Community-Based Education Program, the services that U-Links provides, or the resources that are available to the community, please contact the Centre by writing to ulinks@on.aibn.com or calling 286-2411.

440 THANK YOU

WHO WOULD HAVE THOUGHT my swim to Puffer's Island and back would be so successful? I was able to raise over $3,200 for Breast Cancer Research. I could not have done this without the support of so many people. A very special thank you to one who helped out. Every contribution was very much appreciated! Sincerely, Amanda Lytle.

450 IN MEMORIAM

DAWSON, BETTY - In loving memory of a dear mother who passed away October 12, 2002.
You are not forgotten, dear mother
Nor ever will you be,
As long as life and memory lasts,
We will remember thee.
Sadly missed by daughter Kathy and son-in-law Keith.

SMITH, GLEN - Brother Glen Smith
passed away October 9, 2002.
Those whom we love go out of sight,
But never out of mind;
They are cherished in the hearts
Of those they leave behind.
Remembered by Sister Verna, Beau
and Families.

SMITH, GLEN - In loving memory of our father and grandfather who passed away on October 9, 2002.
Your presence we miss,
Your memory we treasure,
Loving you always,
Forgetting you never.
Forever in our thoughts, Tim, Laurie,
Amber and Dallyn.

SMITH, GLEN - Past away October 9, 2002. In loving memory of a
